SUGGESTED HEAD: Professional Communications Systems, Inc. Appoints John Hofmann as Director of Technical Operations

John Hofmann

PCS Director of Technical Operations

TAMPA, Fla., June 7, 2007 --- Professional Communications Systems, Inc. (PCS) today announced the appointment of John Hofmann as Director of Technical Operations. Hofmann brings to the company more than 20 years of operations management experience for both governmental and commercial organizations.

Hofmann was previously with SRI/Surgical in Tampa, FL where he held positions as Plant Manager, Director of Operations and Mid-Atlantic General Manager, respectively. He also served in the United States Air Force for more than 20 years as both flight crew member and Chief Master Sergeant of the 99th Military Airlift Squadron.

Company president Ray A. "Tony" Stephens said "John is an excellent addition to the PCS organization. His depth of experience and operations management background will ensure that we are optimizing efficiency, quality output and client satisfaction."

Hofmann will be responsible for planning and managing PCS Technical Operations resources, and for developing and maintaining operational procedures and standards. His focus will be on increasing productivity and efficiency, ensuring that projects are planned properly and transitioned successfully between departments. He will oversee the quality of all installation, maintenance and repair work performed by PCS. Hofmann will also manage the PCS subcontractor program and will interface with equipment manufacturers, materials providers, and construction-related trade organizations.

Hofmann is a graduate of Embry Riddle University and several USAF officer management training programs.
